Refundable vs. Non-refundable Fares Contact 🗨️ 📞 +1 || +18552856061 📞 +18664837060 📞.

Southwest Airlines offers different fare types which may be fully refundable, partially refundable, or non-refundable. Southwest Airlines displays this information during the booking process so you can choose the best fare type for your trip.

#Refundable fares allow you to cancel a flight and receive a full or partial refund. They're usually more expensive than other fare types, in return for the greater flexibility they offer.

#Partially refundable fares permit you to get a portion of your money back if you cancel the flight. The airline keeps the remainder as a service fee. In this case, Southwest Airlines will issue you a refund for the original purchase price minus the fee amount.

#Non-refundable fares are just that – no refunds if you cancel. This fare type usually doesn't allow ticket changes, either. Basic economy and Light (or "Lite") fares are almost always non-refundable.

One final thing to keep in mind is that even if you're not entitled to a refund, you should still cancel the reservation if you don't plan to be on the plane.
